

How to Measure Light Pollution

Using the planisphere included in the Neighborhood Science kit, identify specific stars and constellations in the sky. Using a colored marker or highlighter, mark them on the chart below.

(Tip: Sirius is often the brightest star in the sky, located close to Orion's belt, a line of three close stars. The Big Dipper and Little Dipper are also easily recognizable.)

